This paper, based on quantitative surveys at the level of primary health care facilities, health care personnel, and households in their vicinity, aims at understanding the performance of primary health care providers in four states in Nigeria. As possible ways to improve performance, the paper concludes that clearly defining lines of responsibility, implementing performance-based financing of local governments and providers, and collecting, analyzing, and sharing information are some options that can help realign incentives and improve accountability in the service delivery chain and service provision. This working paper was produced as part of the World Bank's Africa Region Health Systems for Outcomes (HSO) Program. The Program, funded by the World Bank, the Government of Norway, the Government of the United Kingdom, and the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunization (GAVI), focuses on strengthening health systems in Africa to reach the poor and achieve tangible results related to Health, Nutrition, and Population. The main pillars and focus of the program center on knowledge and capacity building related to Human Resources for Health, Health Financing, Pharma-ceuticals, Governance and Service Delivery, and Infrastructure and ICT. Fire Investigator The interRAI HC Assessment System has been designed to be a user-friendly, reliable, person-centered system that informs and guides comprehensive planning of care and services for elderly and disabled persons in community-based settings around the world. It focuses on the person's functioning and quality of life by assessing needs, strengths, and preferences. It also facilitates referrals when appropriate. When used on multiple occasions, it provides the basis for an outcome-based assessment of the person's response to care or services. The interRAI HC Assessment System can be used to assess persons with chronic needs for care, as well as with post-acute care needs (e.g., after hospitalization or in a hospital-at-home situation). CRITICAL THINKING: A USER'S MANUAL offers an innovative skill-based approach to critical thinking that provides step-by-step tools for examining arguments. Users build a complete skill set by recognizing, analyzing, diagramming, and evaluating arguments. Later chapters encourage application of the basic skills to categorical, truth-functional, analogical and inductive, and causal arguments as well as fallacies. Exercises throughout the book engage readers in active learning, integrate writing as part of the critical thinking process, and emphasize skill transference. We camp to escape, to retreat, to "find" ourselves. The camp serves as a home-away-from-home where we might rethink a deliberate life. We also camp to find a new collective space where family and society converge. Many of us attended summer camps, and the legacies of these childhood havens form part of American culture. In Campsite, Charlie Hailey provides a highly original and artfully composed interpretation of the cultural significance and inherently paradoxical nature of camps and camping in contemporary American society. Offering a new understanding of the complex relationship between place, time, and architecture in an increasingly mobile culture, Hailey explores campsites as places that necessitate a unique combination of contrasting qualities, such as locality and foreignness, mobility and fixity, temporality and permanence, and public domesticity. Camping methods reflect the rigid flexibility of the process: leaving home, arriving at a site, clearing an area, making and then finally breaking camp. The phases of this sequence are both separate and indistinct. To understand this paradox, Hailey emphasizes the role of process. He constructs a philosophical framework to elucidate the "placefulness" -- or sense of place -- of such temporary constructions and provides alternative understandings of how we think of the home and of public versus private dwelling spaces. Historically, camps have been used as places for scouting out future towns, for clearing provisional spaces, and for making semipermanent homes-away-from-home. To understand how "cultures of camping" develop and accommodate this dynamic mix of permanence and flexibility, Hailey looks at three basic qualities of the camp: as a site for place-making, as a populist precursor for modern built environments, and as a "method." Hailey's creative and philosophical approach to camps and camping allows him to construct links between such diverse projects as the "philosophers' camps" of the mid-nineteenth century, the idiosyncratic camping clubs that arose with the automobile culture in the early 1920s, and more recent uses of campsites as temporary housing for those displaced by Hurricane Katrina. In Campsite, Hailey makes a singular and significant contribution to current studies of place and vernacular architecture while also reconfiguring methods of research in cultural studies, architectural theory, and geography. Excerpt from The After-Treatment of Operations: Manual for Practitioners and House Surgeons The continued popularity of this book and the call for a fourth edition are very gratifying, and show that it has, at any rate, proved of real value to those readers for whom it was designed. In the present edition much new matter has been added, and the whole book, as far as is possible, brought completely up to date. In particular the chapter on Surgical Shock has been entirely rewritten in the light of more recent work on this subject. Although the treatment of Gunshot Wounds is, perhaps, not strictly within the scope of this book, there are so many medical men at present acting as surgeons in charge of military hospitals of one kind or another, that the author thinks a chapter on this subject will be a useful addition, more especially as he has received requests from old readers to include such a chapter in the present edition. A very natural criticism that has been made by some reviewers of previous editions is, that while the after-treatment of some operations is very fully described, that of others is only scantily treated. The author wishes to point out that this is necessarily so in a work of this size, as without greatly enlarging the book it would be impossible to describe the after-treatment of all the operations in any detail. The RDS-1 was created as a prototype for evaluation of a complex, portable, turnkey, video / audio recording studio for today's Concert Video Producers, TV Producers, industrial Media departments, high end Videographer, or well-funded Band that wants to produce their own video segments. The 24 track 24 bit hard disk recording deck from Mackie takes the 24 tracks from the 2 on board retractable Mackie 1604 VLZ mixing boards and cleanly records them onto a removable computer hard disk. This unit also provides equipment to direct a 6 video camera crew including video screens, preview and program out switchers and an intercom system. Even though major pieces of equipment like the Makie 24/96 hard disk recorder are out of production there are a number of even better recorders that can take its place when you decide to make your own recording console. This book will be an invaluable tool at the design stage as well as a guide to write your own OPERATIONS MANUAL. Captain Willy This manual contains guidance on food safety standards for the catering industry, developed by the Scottish HACCP Working Group of the Scottish Food Enforcement Liaison Committee on behalf of the Food Standards Agency Scotland. The guidance builds on existing good practice and takes account of the requirements of European food safety legislation which requires that all food businesses apply food safety management procedures based on 'Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Point' (HACCP) principles.
