The Miracle of Kathleen: The Kathleen Wright Story 2022

Kathleen's Diamonds May 13 2022 Kathleen's Diamonds : or She Loved a Handsome Actor Incredible, you say? Alas, it was too true! She was dead by her own hand, the beautiful child-wife of Vincent Carew, the millionaire—dead in youth and beauty, leaving behind her all that life held for a worshipped wife, a loving mother; for upstairs at this moment in the silken nursery her child, the daughter Kathleen, barely six months old, lay sweetly sleeping, watched by an attentive French bonne, while in the darkened parlor below, the girlish mother, not yet eighteen, lay pale and beautiful in her coffin, with white flowers blooming on her pulseless breast, hiding the crimson stain where the slight jeweled dagger in her hair had sheathed itself in her tortured heart. She was so young, so ignorant, surely she would have held back her suicidal hand—she would have taken care of her child, the dark-eyed little heiress she was leaving motherless in the wide world that, whatever else it may give us, can not make up for the loss of the one thing life has to offer—a mother's love! It is always a terrible misfortune for a young girl to be motherless, and it was going to be the tragedy of Kathleen Carew that she had no mother. The dagger-thrust that let out the life-blood of her mother, Zaidee Carew turned the whole course of her daughter's life aside into different channels.

Tracks of a Thief In 21 2020 The man known as Clark Durbin worked for the Comstock National Bank as a consultant in computer programming for over ten years. Durbin was described as approximately 65 years old, had a full head of gray hair and a full beard that was also gray. He was approximately six foot tall and was overweight. He had a cheerful demeanor and sparkling blue eyes—the type of individual one was inclined to instinctively trust. This was of course a disguise. He was actually 48 years old, five foot eleven inches tall, weighed 170 pounds, had brown hair, brown eyes, was clean shaven, and his name was not Mark Durbin. After the fraudulent transfer of fifty million dollars to a numbered account in Zurich, Durbin disappeared, leaving no tracks. Jeremiah Jones, a private investigator with a reputation for finding people who don't want to be found, was contracted by the bank to recover the money and find the thief. The thief's attempt to make himself seemingly invisible challenged Jeremiah's tracking skills. Tracking was done in the mind as much or more than by following physical or electronic trails, which in this case were few. After some misdirection, false trails, and bad assumptions, Jeremiah, at a considerable personal risk, successfully located the money and returned it to the bank. However, identifying the thief proved to be more challenging.

Walter Gordon and the Rise of Canadian Nationalism May 21 2020 Walter Gordon and the Rise of Canadian Nationalism is an examination of the origins of Walter Gordon's nationalist ideology and its impact on Canada. It traces his life from his family influences and the intellectual currents present in his early work as a chartered accountant, public servant, and head of a small conglomerate. Drawing on extensive interviews and impressive research, Azar provides not only a biography of an important political figure but a significant study of the political and intellectual controversies that Gordon and his ideology created, shedding light on the larger political and economic questions of the postwar era.

White Wedding Mar 31 2021 "White Wedding by Kathleen J. Woods is a novel in which a woman shows up uninvited to a wedding. The uninvited guest exists on layers of sense and story, and through her tales, gives the other guests shades of the caterer, the pregnant bride, the bride's stepsister, and other family-who-wants-what, whether they like it or not"--

The Wedding Gift Feb 22 2023 Leann wasn't good enough for her upper-crust in-laws, so they gave her the mansion none of them wanted. Years ago, someone in the house killed Leann's brother. Will its violent secrets kill her? . . . a spine-electrifying supernatural tale where a huge Southern States mansion contains one of the most terrifying, violent and indeed psychopathic ghost stories in any town. It is also a murder mystery--why did Robina Willets apparently kill five of her young children, and her husband, before stabbing herself to death? if you are in the camp of believing that 'Justice . . . just is not,' then this will have you frothing at the mouth with righteous social fury." --Tim Roux, author of Black and Blue and The Dance of the Pheasant Kathleen McKenna is a former adolescent worker who holds a degree in Sociology. She is from Alaska and, after relocating to New Mexico, began writing. An admitted aficionado of a good scary tale, she began The Wedding Gift following a visit to New Orleans, where she saw a beautiful antebellum house and began imagining what if there were a beautiful young girl from the wrong side of the tracks who married her way in and then if there was already a ghost there . . . . She shares her home in New Mexico with a morbidly obese, alcoholic Old English Sheepdog and is presently working on a new novel.

The Myth of an Irish Cinema | July 23 2020 For the past seventy years the discipline of film studies has widely invoked the term national cinema. Such a concept suggests a unified identity with distinct cultural narratives. As the current conversation over the meaning of nation and nationalism has made thoughtful readers question the term, its application to the field of film studies has become the subject of interrogation. In The Myth of an Irish Cinema, Michael Patrick Gillespie presents a groundbreaking challenge to the traditional view of filmmaking, contesting the existence of an Irish national cinema. Given the social, economic, and cultural complexity of contemporary Irish identity, Gillespie argues, filmmakers can no longer present Irishness as a monolithic entity. The book is arranged thematically with chapters exploring cinematic representation of the middle class, urban and rural life, religion, and politics. Offering close readings of Irish-themed films, Gillespie identifies a variety of interpretative approaches based on the diverse elements that define national character. Covering a wide range of films, from Ford's The Quiet Man and Kirk Jones's Waking Ned Devine to Bob Quinn's controversial Budawanny and The Bishop's Story, The Myth of an Irish Cinema signals a paradigm shift in the field of film studies and promises to reinvigorate dialogue on the subject of national cinema.

The Wedding Present | Nov 26 2020 In this fascinating work, Louise Purbrick offers an alternative analysis of contemporary domestic consumption. She investigates ritualized presentation of objects upon marriage, and their subsequent cycles of exchange within the domestic sphere. Focusing on gift-giving in Britain from the past to the present, comparative context is provided by material from North America and Europe. Presenting new material on the enactment of exchange relations within everyday domesticity, the book makes significant historical, theoretical, and methodological contributions to the analysis of contemporary consumption. It re-evaluates consumption theory as well as examining the methodology of film studies in consumption and domesticity, pressing for a more rigorous approach to the use of case studies. By considering how the specific contexts in which consumption occurs, such as married domesticity, can limit possible versions of selfhood, The Wedding Present tests the assumption that consuming creates individual identities. Thus, the book argues, consumption cannot be isolated as an explanation of individual or social formation.

Suitable Strangers Sep 17 2022 In 1956, a group of 548 refugees escaping the violence of the Hungarian Revolution arrived on the shores of Ireland. With Irish history shaped by waves of emigration to escape war, famine, and religious persecution, Ireland responded by creating its first international refugee settlement. Suitable Strangers reveals the firsthand experiences of the men, women, and children who lived in the Knockalisheen refugee camp near Limerick. For the majority of those living in the camp, Ireland was meant to be a temporary waystation on their ultimate journeys, primarily to Canada, the United States, and Australia. But after almost six months of uncertainty and feeling neglected by the Irish government, the Hungarian refugees began a hunger strike, which garnered national resentment and international headlines. Vera Sheridan explores this period and ensuing events by offering a complex and nuanced examination of the camp routines, state policies, and international motives that shaped life in the camp. A fascinating read for historians as well as those interested in refugee and migration studies, Suitable Strangers complicates the Irish diaspora by providing a clear look at the realities of Ireland's Knockalisheen refugee settlement.

Not Just Walking Nov 14 2019 Not Just Walking is the straightforward autobiography of a guy who absolutely enjoyed most moments of his not-so-everyday life-even as he dealt with a tumultuous childhood and the ravages of multiple sclerosis. Growing up in New Jersey was a tumultuous experience for author Van E. Graef: his parents' marital problems eventually led to their divorce and a babysitter sexually abused him when he was four years old. The one thing that provided him solace was fishing, whether it was at Highland Lakes by the family cabin, Swartswood Lake, or Peters Brook. As he got older, Graef began to demonstrate strong athletic talent. In high school he played football and baseball and he excelled in baseball. By the time he was a senior, Graef had won an MVP for his athletic ability. It was during this time that he began to notice what he realized to be early symptoms of multiple sclerosis: fatigue, followed by numbness in his hands and feet. The symptoms progressed to the point that Graef had to be confined to a wheelchair, and, eventually, he became a quadriplegic. Not Just Walking details Graef's ongoing struggle with the crippling effects of multiple sclerosis and how he copes through humor, faith, and old-fashioned love.
