This book is intended for anyone whose job involves writing formal documentation. It is aimed at non-native speakers of English, but should also be of use for native speakers who have no training in technical writing. Technical writing is a skill that you can learn and this book outlines some simple ideas for writing clear documentation that will reflect well on your company, its image and its brand. The book has four parts: Structure and Content: Through examples, you will learn best practices in writing the various sections of a manual and what content to include. Clear Unambiguous English: You will learn how to write short clear sentences and paragraphs whose meaning will be immediately clear to the reader. Layout and Order Information: Here you will find guidelines on style issues, e.g., headings, bullets, punctuation and capitalization. Typical Grammar and Vocabulary Mistakes: This section is divided alphabetically and covers grammatical and vocabulary issues that are typical of user manuals. Alain de Botton explores our relationship with 'the news' in this book full of his trademark wit and wisdom. Following on from his bestselling Religion for Atheists, Alain de Botton turns now to look at the manic and peculiar positions that 'the news' occupies in our lives. We invest it with an authority and importance which used to be the preserve of religion - but what does it do for us? Mixing current affairs with philosophical reflections, de Botton offers a brilliant illustrated guide to the precautions we should take before venturing anywhere near the news and the 'noise' it generates. Witty and global in reach, The News will ensure you'll never look at reports of a celebrity story or political scandal in quite the same way again. Praise for Religion for Atheists: 'Smart and manual accompanies a workshop called ThinkTV and is based on the idea that television can be used to develop important literacy & life skills, including critical thinking. ThinkTV workshops are directed at parents and combine strategies from two related fields, critical thinking education and media literacy education. The manual will assist workshop facilitators who have some experience working with adults but who may have little or no background in teaching media literacy or critical thinking. The introduction includes an overview of key concepts of critical thinking, critical viewing, and media literacy. The main section presents instructions for workshop facilitators and workshop activities & schedules for three core ThinkTV workshops and two optional workshops. The core workshops explore why television should be taken seriously, how to understand & manage the ways that learners & their families use television in the home, and how to encourage active viewing and to use television to support school success. The optional workshops cover the language of television (how production techniques affect viewers & contribute to meaning) and the commercial aspect of television (advertising) and how it influences viewers & programs.
