Classic Tales by Famous Authors Nov 21 2019 Excerpt from Classic Tales by Famous Authors: Containing Complete Selections From the World's Best Authors With Prefatory, Biographical and Synoptical Notes This is an Oriental tale of a man who loved only himself, who devoted his life to covetousness, to the gathering of rice and the gathering of wealth; and of another, his foster brother, who took no thought of riches, but lived for brave deeds, for good works and acts of friendship and kindness. Mansour, a great merchant, sought by enchantment to gain good fortune for Omar, his newly born son; and, praying that the child might become a man of great riches, good health and love no one but himself, his prayer was granted. Halima, the widow of a brave Bedouin chief, besought that Abdallah, her son, might be virtuous and happy. Omar, the son of the rich merchant, became the foster-brother of the young Bedouin, and the boys grew up together, to follow different paths in after life - Omar to amass great wealth through greed and cunning, Abdallah to seek the four-leaved shamrock, the magic talisman of contentment and happiness, to be found only by self-denial and good deeds. The son of the desert is generous and brave - toils for the good of his people, fights to succor those in danger, and dies the death of a brave man through the treachery of Omar, to find his reward in Paradise. The wretched Omar finds that his wealth and cunning give him naught but perdition. The Selection of Ministers around the World Sep 24 2022

Governing cabinets are composed of ministers who come and go even as governments march on. They work for the chief executive, the prime minister or the president, for their parties and for constituent groups from which they come. They are chosen for their role and dismissed from it for all sorts of reasons that vary across time and country. This book examines the process of selection, shuffling and removal of ministers in national cabinets around the world. Drawing on original data over several decades, it offers a series of case studies of countries from all over the world with differing institutional and cultural structures, including presidential and semi-presidential systems, and parliamentary, unitary and federal systems, some of which have experienced periods under authoritarian regimes. Featuring detailed case studies on North and South America, Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand, this book complements the earlier volume Selection of Ministers in Europe (Routledge, 2009). This volume will be an important reference for students and scholars of political science, government, executives, comparative politics and political parties.

Jan 24 2020 Excerpt from The International Library of Famous Literature, Vol. 13 of 20: Selections From the World's Great Writers, Ancient, Medieval, and Modern, With Biographical and Explanatory Notes and Critical Essays IF we accept Buffon's famous dictum, that the style is the man, it might be expected that the writings of men of science would be as ruggedly fact-based as unimaginative, as inartistic as science is usually supposed to be. Yet Buffon himself, famed as a writer a century ago, and remembered to-day chiefly for his mastery of literary style, profession a naturalist. His greater contemporary, Voltaire, master litterateur of France, did not hesitate to pose as a in science as well. Again, Dante, the one world classic of the Italian language, was learned in every phase of the known science of his time. Keats, one of the few writers of English critics have ventured to name in the same breath with Shakespeare, was trained to the profession of medicine. Goldsmith, famed for the lucidity of his verse and prose alike a practising physician. So was Schiller, the second poet of Germany; while his one master in that tongue, the incomparable Goethe, whose genius raised the German language to a new plane as a medium of literary expression, would be remembered as a discoverer in science had he never penned a page that be called literature. Turning to America we find that Franklin one man who attained distinction as a writer in Colonial days was equally distinguished as a scientist; and everyone will remember that in a later day the most genial of poets, Holmes, made literature only a staff, to quote his own happy phrase, his calling being medicine, and his specialty anatomy, the veritable dry bones of medicine at that. Selection and Decision in Judicial Process Around the World 28 2023 Leading empirical legal scholars from around the world explore whether and under what conditions the judicial process is efficient.

Selection and Decision in Judicial Process around the World
21 2019 This book empirically explores whether and under what conditions the judicial process is efficient. Three specific issues are addressed: first, disputants self-select into litigation. Do they tend to bring cases with merit? Second, filed cases differ in their social import. Do courts select more important cases to devote more resource to? Third, courts establish precedents, affecting resource allocation in the cases at hand, and influence future behaviours of transacting parties. Do courts, like Judge Posner asserts, tend to make decisions that enhance allocative efficiency and reduce transaction costs? Positive answers to the above questions attest to the efficiency of the judicial process. What drive efficient or inefficient outcomes are the selections and decisions by litigants, litigators, and judges. Their earlier selections and decisions affect later ones. Eleven chapters in this book, authored by leading empirical legal scholars in the world, deal with these issues in the US, Europe, and Asia.
