Lifelong learning is currently a major concern of governments who wish to see their citizens remain employable while the job market changes. Critical to this are digital learning centres where learning is delivered through internet access or via CD-based packages. Access to these turns public libraries and community networks into 'multi media neighbourhood superstores' where print-based learning materials are enhanced by multimedia. The multiplicity of sources of learning materials and experiences reinforces and extends the traditional role of the librarian as mediator between the user and their needs. To support and foster these activities frontline public library and community network staff must be capable of offering user support and advice in a much wider arena. This requires training in new knowledge and skill sets. This timely new book offers practical guidance and expertise for public library and community network staff in setting up, running and developing an effective digital learning centre based within the People's Network or in a related community networking initiative. It has a holistic focus on the use of ICT, taking staff beyond user training applications into areas of network management, e-learning, digitization, web design and XML that staff face on a day-to-day basis. Key areas covered include: PC installation and maintenance managing a network and coping with the security issues of internet connection understanding and supporting lifelong learning digitization of

"We know more than we can tell and we can know nothing without relying upon those things which we may not be able to tell" (Michael Polanyi) The importance of knowledge management (KM) is increasingly recognized in the public sector and in relation with e-government implementations. Because governments and public administrations deal with information and knowledge on a large scale, this domain is particularly predestined to actively practice KM: much of the work of public authorities refers to the elaboration of data, information and knowledge on citizens, businesses, society, the markets, the environment, laws, politics, etc. Even many "products" of public administration and government are delivered in the shape of information and knowledge themselves. This aspect especially applies to the policies, management, regulation and monitoring of society, markets and the environment. With the recent evolution of e-government projects, high expectations are linked. As a consequence, efficient support from adequate KM concepts and tools to exploit the huge knowledge and information resources dealt with in e-government is expected. Not only the trend towards a knowledge society calls for KM solutions. Current e-government developments significantly influence the public sector. These require the rethinking of knowledge distribution and management: Citizen- and business-oriented service delivery, including one-stop service provision, inter-organizational co-operation between government agencies and cross-border support for complex administrative decision making call for largely opened-up access to remote information and knowledge resources. E-government – and especially the concept of online one-stop government – integrates dislocated information and knowledge sources into a global virtual knowledge fabric. This ultimate guide to installing the LSX in your GM muscle car details all the necessary steps from concept to completion, including fabrication and installation of motor mounts, wiring, fuel system, and driveline considerations. The only complete new-car buying guide, this new edition covers more than 190 passenger cars, minivans, pickup trucks, and sport utility vehicles for 2001.
